

PJ Tabit

PJ Tabit is a senior supervisory policy analyst at the Federal Reserve Board of Governors conducting financial and policy analysis of the student loan, auto loan, and credit scoring markets.

He has previously held positions at the Congressional Research Reserve and the U.S. House of Representatives. He is also a co-founder and current chair of the board of directors of the Wiki Education Foundation, a San Francisco-based non-profit, and co-organizer of SoundScene, one of the country's largest audio art festivals.

He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Scranton and master's degrees from the George Washington University and Northwestern University.